Nova Scotia might have been benefited by that great inrush of Scotch if the Scotch had not come in glass containers.

The quarry owners of Barre are optimistic over the outlook for development of the granite business out of the depression that has existed for some months. So is everybody else who realizes the excellence of the product which Barre has to sell to the world. Talk up, not down.

If Dempsey and Carpentier are fighting for the title instead of for the money why don't they go out on an island of the Pacific and, before a few witnesses, fight it out. The few witnesses could bring back the proof of which is the better man? But when they hold out for a fabulous gate receipt their purposes are at once open to suspicion.

The invincible "Strangler" Lewis takes a fall from public opinion and declares he is willing to give up the headlock, or so-called strangle hold, which has brought certain phases of professional wrestling into such disrepute of late. His proposed action, followed by similar action by others, will yet save the sport from complete banishment from decent circles.

Failure to impose a quarantine and to make report of a case of diphtheria has caused one Vermont physician to pay a fine of $25, with costs. It would seem that a doctor ought to be the man to appreciate most of the advantages of quarantine and to insist that quarantine should be lived up to. If doctors do not meet the law's requirements in this matter, how can the people be expected to respect quarantine regulations?

That new Russian government founded largely in Paris does not convey to the world full confidence as yet in its power to become the government at Moscow or Petrograd; yet one is compelled to agree that the tendency of it is in the right direction. Naturally enough, any government founded away from the country where it proposes to locate would not carry full weight with those it hoped to impress.

The late Thomas H. Cave, sr., of Barre was a disciple of the old school of printers in Vermont who brought honor to the craft through thorough training and faithful adherence to the fundamentals of the printer's skill. Learning the trade, at least starting in to learn the trade, shortly after the Civil war period, he continued in active business until within a comparatively few years and he maintained a high standard in his printery to the very last of his days at the case.

THE CITY MANAGER PLAN.

There is much to be said in favor of the city manager plan, such as the citizens of St. Albans have voted to adopt in their municipal affairs. The idea is by no means new and it has worked out with some measure of success in other communities, chiefly of the smaller size. There is grave danger, of course, that the plan might center in one person too much authority and too great a multiplicity of detail in order to secure a successful administration of the affairs of a municipality; but there is the counteracting advantage that the direction of the affairs might be placed in the hands of a person who devotes his entire time to the work and who, necessarily, must be trained in that line of activity. With the proper checks and balances a city manager might be able to run a municipality far more economically than the common form of municipal government can do it.

Great business enterprises, which correspond in some respects to the business of a municipality, are generally conducted under one person as a directing head who keeps in close touch with all the affairs of the enterprise either by personal connection or through frequent reports of subordinates. No big business thinks of having a separate and loosely joined authority, each working more or less independently, for that would soon bring chaos of management or reckless expenditure, or something worse. That is why the plan of affairs in a great business is thought to fit the needs of a municipality. We are not convinced that the city manager plan is the best but we are ready to admit that the idea has its good features. It remains to be seen whether the disadvantages are great enough to make it inadvisable to go into that form of government.

The experiment which St. Albans seems about to make will, therefore, prove of benefit to many other municipalities in Vermont and elsewhere. St. Albans is not going to commit itself to the plan for a long period of time but will reserve to itself the right to change at the end of three years if the city manager plan does not work out as well in practice as it seems to promise in theory.

VERMONT'S PLAN OF PROGRESS.

If, as seems probable, House bill No. 37, to establish a commission on foreign and domestic commerce, is the first embodiment of Governor Hartness' ideas regarding the expansion of Vermont—of that new Vermont which was spoken so much about during the campaign preceding the nomination of candidates last summer—there should be no disposition on the part of the legislature to block that move providing, of course, the plan does not contemplate a great outlay of money along lines which seem unreasonable. Vermont is by no means hostile to Governor Hartness and, of course, should not be hostile to any proposition to expand the influence and prosperity of the state if the proposition is carried out on a scale suited to our resources. To be sure, a commission is a name with a rather bad omen; that is, the multiplicity of commissions has such an omen to many of the people of the state. There is much well-founded criticism of the creation of this and that commission to carry out some new idea or to extend the scope of some law perhaps. Yet it is agreed that there must be a working foundation for a movement having a purpose to develop the state in commerce; there must be an organization to put into operation the plans which Governor Hartness may have with a view to that end. What more natural than that a commission should be created to carry out the administrative work? Let's lend our support to the proposal along reasonable lines. The bill has already passed the House and ought to go through the Senate without further opposition. If Vermont is to advance Vermont must accept some feasible plan. A commission working under the direction of Governor Hartness may be able to present that feasible plan.

Postponed.

Tom—Haven't you begun housekeeping yet?
Fred—No; you see we're waiting till we have saved up enough to live in keeping with the style of our wedding presents.—Boston Transcript.

Avoiding "Coin" and "Coop."

"Quineidence" is the way a recent writer spells it. Excellent! Now if authors and printers will quaperate, we'll get rid of some more of those awkward-looking words beginning with "co."—Boston Transcript.

Not Without Some Truth.

Correspondent referring to our note on misquotations of Scripture by children adds this one: Asked by his Sunday school teacher to give the golden text, a youngster recited, "He that humpheth himself shall be exalted."—Boston Transcript.

Ways of Preparing Apples.

If children are allowed to eat raw apples—and nothing is better for them if the apples are ripe—he sure that they are clean. Don't just hold them for a moment under the running water and trust to luck that all the dangerous germs are washed off, says the Boston Herald. For it is supposed that the germ of some of the troubles that green fruit causes is on the skin of the fruit.

Apple sauce is never so good as when it is made from tart, green apples. Try leaving the skins on and the seeds in and simply quartering the apples. When they are tender rub the pulp through a sieve and sweeten and flavor to taste. Apple sauce made in this way is delicious, easy to make and has a color gained from the skins—especially if the apples used are green apples touched with red.

If you have flavorless apples, stew them with a few slices of quince. The pungent taste of the quince is good with the apple.

This is a good time of year to make apple jelly. Select firm, winter apples, with a tart flavor. Wash them and dry them carefully and cut them in quarters. Cover them in a big granite kettle, with water, using about half as much water, by measure, as you have apples. Cook slowly until the apples are tender. Put them in a cheesecloth bag and strain off the juice. Measure it, and for every pint add a pint of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then put it over the fire. When it boils, draw it back and skim it. Boil and skim again and then a third time. Have jelly glasses in a pan of hot water on the stove and pour the jelly, after the third skimming, into the hot glasses. Cover the jars with sheets of glass—old window or picture glass—in a sunny window until it is set.

Fried apples, served with broiled bacon, is a delicious dish for frosty autumn days. Broil the bacon brown, or else fry it. Slice tart apples about a quarter of an inch thick and fry them either in drippings or in the bacon fat. When the apple is well browned and tender, drain it on brown paper. Sprinkle it with a dash of grated nutmeg, and send hot, with the hot, crisp bacon to the table.

Apples a la Windsor—Pare and core a dozen apples and rub each apple with a cut lemon to keep it white. Boil in a thin sugar syrup until tender, but not broken. Drain on a sieve. Have ready some rice cooked as for croquettes and spread a smooth layer about half an inch thick on a pan; sprinkle with powdered sugar and glaze in the oven until a light brown. Then with a small sized biscuit cutter cut out rounds of the rice and arrange on a flat baking dish for sweetmeats. Place an apple on each round and fill the cavity in each apple with peach or orange marmalade. Ornament, if you like, with candied fruits; reduce the syrup to proper consistency—that of honey—and pour over the apples. Serve with whipped or plain cream.

Delicious apple omelets—To make two large omelets take the yolks of eight fresh eggs and beat very light with four ounces of powdered sugar and grated yellow from half a lemon rind. Add a pound of fine, sifted flour, alternately with the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff white froth. Mix well but lightly and then fold in a cup of whipped cream. Bake in two large flat omelets in a moderately hot oven for five minutes, then carefully spread with rich, thick apple sauce; roll each omelet up and place them both on a heated platter, side by side; sprinkle with powdered sugar and slip in the broiling oven of your gas-range for a few seconds, turning the flames down quite low. Serve at once.

Jersey tart—Line a 10-inch wide pastry circle with puff paste. Place the circle on a baking sheet; line the paste with a buttered strip of paper and fill with flour or cornmeal and bake as you would a pie. Remove the flour or cornmeal and the paper and pare and cut in halves eight large green apples, removing the cores. Rub them with half a lemon to prevent the apples turning dark and cook them in a syrup until just tender. Drain on a fine sieve. Spread a layer of thick, rich apple sauce on the crust and arrange the cooked apples, the rounded side uppermost. Add a cup of hard cider to the syrup and cook down to rich syrup. Cool partially; pour over the apples and serve cold.

Baked apples, Polish style—Pare and core a dozen cooking apples and cut crosswise in thin slices. Spread a thin layer of orange, peach or apricot marmalade in a baking dish and arrange the slices, overlapping each other, in a dish, with alternate layers of the marmalade. Chopped almonds sprinkled over the marmalade may be added. Arrange in pyramid form, pour a little thick sugar over it and put in oven for an hour and serve in the same dish with sweet or whipped cream.

Too Long a Swim.

An American tourist in Scotland took a great fancy to a handsome collie he saw and offered to buy it. The owner asked some questions and on learning that it was the would-be purchaser's intention to take "Jock" to America, he refused to part with the dog.

Just then an English tourist came along and he also made a bid for the collie which, though less than the first offer, was finally accepted. The American was annoyed and when the Englishman had departed he said, "You told me you wouldn't sell your dog."
"Na, na," replied the nanny Scot. "I said I couldn't part wi' him. Jock'll be back in a day or two, never fear. But he couldn't swim the Atlantic!"—Boston Transcript.

This Leaves the Arms Free From Hairy Growths

(Toilet Talks)

A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuzz is here given. This is painless and usually a single treatment will banish even stubborn growths. To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered talc and water, spread on hairy surface and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain you get talc—Adv.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. Red Cross Pharmacy has been appointed agent for Allen in this vicinity with the understanding that he will freely return the purchase money on the first two bottles to all who state they received no benefit.—Adv.
